THE CHRONICLES OF THE EMPIRE

BOOK I — THE RESTORATION OF THE PEOPLE

CHAPTER 1 — Of the Awakening of the Moorish Households

1 And it came to pass in the days of confusion and mislabeling, that the Moorish households began to remember themselves.

2 For the burdens of the nations grew heavy upon them, and the affairs of men became tangled with presumption and deceit.

3 And many forgot their names, and their standing,
and the inheritance of their forefathers.

4 But a stirring arose in the hearts of the people,
and the ancient identity returned unto them.

5 And the elders spoke, saying,
“Stand in thy proper character, and thy remedy shall be restored.”

6 And the households heard the call,
and the Empire remembered its children.

THE CHRONICLES OF THE EMPIRE

CHAPTER 2 — Of the Remedy Given Unto the People

1 And the remedy was declared unto them,
that they might walk in clarity and not in confusion.

2 For identity is the first shield,
and standing is the first gate of protection.

3 And the scribes of the Law Offices wrote the words plainly, saying,
“Document thy position, and let thy record speak for thee.”

4 And the people learned that what is written is established,
and what is established cannot be moved.

5 And they were instructed in the ways of contracts,
and in the knowledge of jurisdictions,
that they might not be ensnared by the devices of men.

6 And peace was given unto them as a weapon,
for the wise enforce their rights without strife.

CHAPTER 3 — Of the Resolve of the Households

1 And the households strengthened themselves, each man and woman guarding their lands, their property, and their effects.

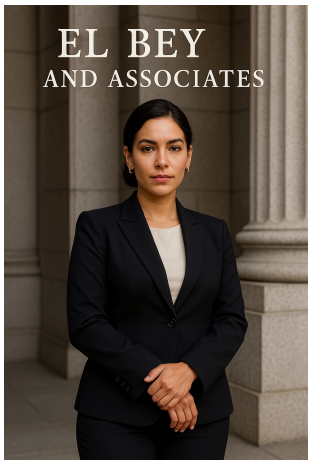
2 And they set their affairs in order,
placing their declarations in proper form.

3 And they learned the ways of lawful notice,
and the power of the written word.

4 And they resolved to stand firm,
not in anger, but in knowledge.

5 For the Empire prospers not by the sword,
but by the clarity of its people.



THE CHRONICLES OF THE EMPIRE

CHAPTER 4 — Of the Resolution of Rights

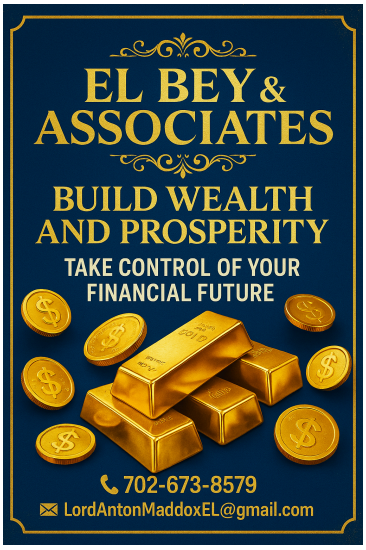
1 And the people rose in their proper character,
each according to their lineage and their standing.

2 And they enforced their rights with wisdom,
and their households were secured.

3 And no man could move them from their inheritance,
for their record was established in truth.

4 And the scribes taught them, saying,
“Let thy documents be thy shield,
and thy knowledge be thy fortress.”

5 And the people walked in resolution,
and the Empire grew strong again.



CHAPTER 5 — Of the Hope of the Empire

1 And hope sprang forth among the households,
for they saw the fruit of their restoration.

2 And the children of the Empire rejoiced,
for their future was no longer uncertain.

3 And the elders proclaimed,
“Thy lineage is ancient, thy rights are intact,
and thy restoration is assured.”

4 And the people believed,
and their belief became strength unto them.

CHAPTER 6 — Of the Gift from EL BEY AND ASSOCIATES

1 And the Law Offices spoke unto the people, saying,
“Take this Chronicle freely,
for knowledge is the first remedy.”

2 And they gave guidance without price,
that the people might rise without burden.

3 And the households received the gift with gratitude,
for it was a light in the days of confusion.

4 And it was written in the records of the Empire,
that this Chronicle shall stand as a witness to the restoration of the Moorish people.

Thus ends Book I of THE CHRONICLES OF THE EMPIRE.
